AN ACT
INSTITUTIONALIZING
GOVERNMENT SUPPORT TO GIFTED AND TALENTED STUDENTS, APPROPRIATING FUNDS THEREFOR AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Article XIV, Section 2 (3) of the 1987 Constitution provides that: "The State shall: [e]stablish and maintain a system of scholarship grants, student loan programs, subsidies, and other incentives which shall be available to deserving students in both public and private schools, especially to the underprivileged."

In this regard, state support is an important factor in enabling students to pursue excellence in the fields of math, science, humanities, arts and sports, which would then translate to high-valued skills and intellectual capital. Incentivizing and subsidizing the education of deserving students not only recognizes the vital role of the youth in nation building but also opens up avenues for innovation and occupational specialization.

Gifted and talented learners can become the source of national pride in different fields as they represent the country in competitions and showcases. Once they reach their potentials, they may even provide creative solutions to pressing development issues. The first step in capacity-building is to create a conducive atmosphere for learning that takes into account their specific needs. This is where the current government paradigm falls short.

At present, there is no institutionalized system that aptly caters to the academic demands of gifted and talented learners. Such students require a different treatment and certain adjustments in educational programs as the lack of challenging learning opportunities may cause stagnation that would inhibit them from fully developing.

Gifted education in the Philippines has been limited to a few science and mathematics programs offered by the Philippine Science High School System under the Department of Science and Technology (DOST) and music and arts programs offered by the Philippine High School for the Arts under the National Commission of Culture, and Arts (NCCA). Elite private schools in urban areas mostly monopolize gifted education across the country and access to these institutions can be difficult for marginalized learners.

In sum, there is no unifying body or organization advocating and supervising gifted education in the Philippines. While science schools all over the country have become the current haven for gifted and talented learners, there is much to be desired in terms of access to opportunities and state support.

Now therefore, to give effect to the Constitutional mandate and to institutionalize state sponsorship for gifted learning, this bill aims to provide the following:

- a) A system of acceleration in academic curriculum and student engagement with external mentors from concerned fields of study;
- b) Scholarships, grants and incentives for gifted and talented learners as well as sponsorships in local or international competitions and showcases to enhance competitiveness;
- c) Fellowship placements in various governmental institutions to address the "brain drain" debacle.

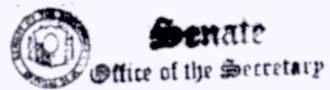

Verily, the potential of gifted and talented learners to create meaningful solutions that could fuel job creation, improve lives and increase efficiency in government services is limitless. It is in the national interest of the Government to hone the brightest minds and give them the opportunity to contribute in addressing the Nation's challenges. Considering the foregoing, the immediate enactment of this bill is respectfully requested.

FRANCIS "TOL" N. TOLENTINO
