AN ACT

INSTITUTING REFORMS TO FURTHER PROTECT AND DEVELOP THE NURSING PROFESSION, AMENDING FOR THE PURPOSE REPUBLIC ACT
NUMBER 9173, OTHERWISE KNOWN AS THE "PHILIPPINE NURSING ACT OF 2002"

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Nursing is one of the top career choices of Filipinos. Enrolment in the course has ballooned from 30,000 in 2010 to about half a million in 2016,¹ producing approximately 200,000 nursing graduates every year². The number of schools offering nursing courses also grew from just 40 in 1970 to more than a hundred at present. The rising enrolment mirrors the rising demand for the services of professional nurses in the Philippines and in other countries. A good number of Filipino doctors also took nursing courses to get advantage of the increasing demand for nurses overseas.

However, despite the large pool of nursing graduates, many nursing positions in public and private health facilities in the country remain unfilled due to many factors, including among others, the low compensation and generally poorer working environment in the country. There is a wide disparity between earnings in local nursing positions against foreign employment. The amount that nurses can earn overseas is about ten times more than what they can earn locally. Thus, Filipino nurses instead of working in the country still prefer to seek employment abroad.

The Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) reported that in 2007, nurse deployment at 12,263 was already double that of 6,410 nurse deployment in 2000. The number of newly-hired nurses going abroad continued to increase from 13,004 in 2009 to 19,551 in 2016, at an average growth rate of 10.5% per year.³ The top ten destination countries in the last ten years were Saudi Arabia; Singapore; United Arab Emirates; Libya; Kuwait; United Kingdom; Qatar; Taiwan; Oman; and Bahrain.⁴

The problem is further aggravated by some abusive practices inflicted on our nursing graduates. In the recent past, many of our nursing graduates were subjected to pay “training fees” and were forced to “volunteer” by hospitals in exchange for the necessary “experience” that they need for employment here and abroad. The hospital experience has become a mandatory prerequisite for employers because of the undesirable reputation of most nursing schools in the country and the quality of education that they offer.

This reality made local employment unattractive for our nurses resulting in the difficulty of realizing the ideal nurse to patient ratio of 1:4 per shift in our country. For instance, the Philippine General Hospital has a nurse to patient ratio of 1:15-26 per shift while Davao del Sur has a province-wide ratio of 1:44-45 per shift.⁵

This bill intends to address the above-mentioned challenges facing the nursing profession in the Philippines by amending Republic Act (R.A.) No. 9173 or the Philippine Nursing Act 2002. It aims to make the law more responsive in addressing the developments in the nursing profession which were not yet present when it was enacted more than a decade ago.

⁵ Department of Health. Health Facilities and Government Health Manpower. 1999-2009.

This bill will institute necessary reforms to further develop the nursing profession, increase protection for nursing professionals and raise the standard of nursing education in the country. It proposes to restructure the scope and practice of nursing by including specific mandates on certification, specialization and educational requirements of nursing graduates; to expand the powers of the Board of Nursing by strengthening its role in decision-making processes; to strengthen the nursing professionals including the faculty and administration of nursing schools; to upgrade the standards in nursing education, practice and guidelines for nursing career progression; and, to provide a better environment for nursing practice.

These reforms envision to enhance the protection and welfare of Filipino nurses to make them responsive to the needs of their patients and the public and private health systems, may it be in-country or overseas.

In view of the foregoing, approval of this Bill is earnestly sought.
